5270-11 Tumbled Shell Pieces

TUMBLLED PAUA SHELL PIECES

The tumbled paua shell pieces are sold in 1/4-pound bags. Some pieces will be very nicely tumbled and polished. Some will have rougher edges. Some quantity will have chips or be broken. We are not selling the pieces as flawless, individually packaged pieces.

There are many uses for the tumbled pieces. They are great for inlay work. They can be put in the bottom of an aquarium or fountain for decoration. They can be used for jewelry.

Paua is the species of abalone shell found only in the cold waters of southern New Zealand. The coloring varies from shell to shell and has an amazing iridescence. The pieces vary in size and shape and come from shells that have been tumbled to a natural, satin, or high gloss finish. Natural finish pieces are tumbled without the polished (satin) finish and have a more rustic look. Satin finish pieces are tumbled to a polished finish. They are good quality shell pieces that tend to be thicker than the gloss finish shells. They are processed with cream and corn grit. Gloss drilled pieces are tumbled to a high gloss finish and each piece is drilled with a small hole at the top. They are processed using hydrochloric acid and the pieces tend to be flatter and thinner than the satin finish pieces. (Haliotis iris, wild).
