

5270-1 African Abalone Shells

CLEANED & EDGED AFRICAN ABALONE SHELLS

220-10-13B

220-10-1314

Great for use
as Smudge Pots!!

The cleaned and edged African Abalone Shells have been cleaned and polished on the inside. A diamond-tip grinder has been used to remove the rough edges. The outside is clean, but rough. We like these better than the Mexican abalone shells and believe that you will too. They are measured lengthwise.

If you are interested in large quantities, please call for a quote. Orders for US$5,000 ex-works or more can be shipped directly from our associate's factory in South Africa.

These shells are a by-product of the food industry. The abalone were not killed just for their shells. (Haliotis midae, ranch).

5270-3 Quahog and Mussel Shells

QUAHOG SHELLS

1080-AS

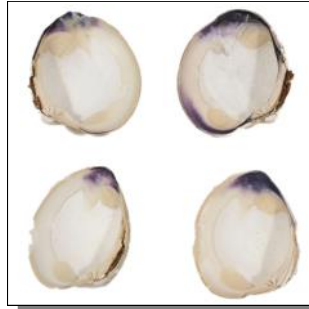

These wild Quahog Shells are sold in lots of 100 shells as we get them in from our shell supplier. These are only available when new shipments arrive and are offered in lots of 100 shells or more to avoid disappointment in the randomness of smaller size orders. When we get in a large shipment, we fill existing large orders and then grade the remaining stock. The assorted shells are not sorted in any way, therefore, the size and degree of purple on a shell can vary significantly and they may also have minor edge chips. They are approximately 4" to 4½" long and 3" to 3½" wide. The shells have been shucked and cleaned in cold water. (Mercenaria mercenaria, wild).

These wild Quahog Shells are sold by the half shell; they do not come in pairs. They are approximately 4" to 4½" long and 3" to 3½" wide. The shells have been shucked and cleaned in cold water.

The select quahog shells are excellent shells with extensive purple that are highly sought after. There may be minor chips, but not significant chips or cracks. These are the top 5% to 10%. We do not upgrade from first quality to select if we run out of first quality.

The vast majority of shells are #1 or first quality. They are good shells with varying levels of purple typically on one side. There may be minor chips, but no major chips or cracks.

The #2 or second quality are full shells with just a touch of purple and/or minor chips.

The #3 or third quality quahogs are full shells, with either no purple or more significant chips, lines, or other cosmetic problems. They can have varying degrees of purple or no purple. The majority of these tend to be good quahogs, just missing the purple edges. (Mercenaria mercenaria, wild).

If you plan to drill the abalone shell pieces, we have been told to drill the pieces in water with a drill press to avoid creating dust. It is not safe to breathe the fine dust created by drilling or sanding abalone. Be careful not to electrocute yourself!

5270-11 Tumbled Shell Pieces

TUMBLLED PAUA SHELL PIECES

The tumbled paua shell pieces are sold in 1/4-pound bags. Some pieces will be very nicely tumbled and polished. Some will have rougher edges. Some quantity will have chips or be broken. We are not selling the pieces as flawless, individually packaged pieces.

There are many uses for the tumbled pieces. They are great for inlay work. They can be put in the bottom of an aquarium or fountain for decoration. They can be used for jewelry.

Paua is the species of abalone shell found only in the cold waters of southern New Zealand. The coloring varies from shell to shell and has an amazing iridescence. The pieces vary in size and shape and come from shells that have been tumbled to a natural, satin, or high gloss finish. Natural finish pieces are tumbled without the polished (satin) finish and have a more rustic look. Satin finish pieces are tumbled to a polished finish. They are good quality shell pieces that tend to be thicker than the gloss finish shells. They are processed with cream and corn grit. Gloss drilled pieces are tumbled to a high gloss finish and each piece is drilled with a small hole at the top. They are processed using hydrochloric acid and the pieces tend to be flatter and thinner than the satin finish pieces. (Haliotis iris, wild).
